Professional Writing for Health Education Professionals and Students

Spend the day with Mark Tomita, PhD, RN, CHES, Associate Professor at Chico State University, for a wonderful opportunity to brush up on your writing skills. This exciting workshop will cover key elements that are essential in a manuscript for successful publication. Hands on writing and helpful advice will be provided throughout the day. Dr. Tomita is the Editor of the Californian Journal of Health Promotion (CJHP) and this publication is primarily a local, peer-reviewed, practice oriented journal that welcomes an assortment of manuscripts and multimedia presentations informing readers about individual health education programs throughout the State. Case studies of health education programs, projects, curricula, lesson plans, etc., are all welcome! Photos of your events are always a plus.

Identifying Health Education Publishing Needs and Interests in California

The purpose of this roundtable session is to identify health education scholarly publishing needs and interests in California. Participants will identify and prioritize publishing needs and interests. There will be discussions of why these publishing areas are important. The CJHP will use the information to set a scholarly publishing agenda that meets the needs and interests of health educators in California. CJHP themed and special issues may be published as a result of the roundtable findings.
